The Great Fire of London

Thomas Farriner was the baker of King Charles II. His bakery shop was on Pudding Lane in London. A spark from one of his ovens started a terrible fire on Sunday 2nd September 1666. It was known as the Great Fire of London.

Timeline

- Sunday The fire spreads along Pudding Lane. King Charles II asks for wooden houses to be knocked down to make gaps in the streets to stop the fire from spreading. His plan doesn't work.
- Monday Many people pack their belongings and leave the city. The fire reaches the Tower of London but the tower doesn't burn down.
- Tuesday The main street in London, Cheapside, catches fire. The fire reaches St Paul's Cathedral and burns it to the ground.
- Wednesday The wind blows the fire towards the river. The fire reaches the river and dies down.
- Thursday Hundreds of soldiers start to clean the streets and put out small fires that are still burning.
- Friday The fire is out.
